of law, by a location in this county. Accordingly in September 1882 this young man came—not to locate, but to investigate the possibilities of establishing himself in this county. This investigation led him to remove to Clearfield County in November 1882. He was admitted to the bar of this county in January 1883 and immediately began the practice of his profession here. The first few years were a struggle. A stranger, without business, social or family relations in the county, it could not be expected that a large and lucrative practice would immediately come to the young man. Gradually, however, character, studious habits, strong mental qualities and careful legal training made their impression on the community and county and young Smith came into his own. He had the quality of making fast and able friendships with the best of our people. He did not have the slow qualities that attract the crowd but the solid attributes of mind and heart that capture and hold the thoughtful and substantial.

Accordingly we early find him selected as the legal advisor of our town Sheriff, R. Newton Shaw, for whom he also acted as a deputy and in a very few years we find that this young lawyer has secured for himself a substantial clientele.

In January 1894 the leading law firm of Clearfield County, the firm of Murray & Gordon was dissolved by the elevation of its junior member, Hon. Cyrus Gordon to the bench. In succession to this firm the law firm of Murray & Smith was formed. This firm consisted of Thos. H. Murray and Allison O. Smith. The firm continued until January 1904 when the junior member thereof, Allison O. Smith was elevated to the bench as President Judge of this judicial district. Judge Smith continued on the bench until succeeded in January 1914 by Hon. Singleton Bell.

Upon his retirement from the bench Judge Smith again took up the practice of law. On Sept. 1st 1917, he associated with himself, his son William Wallace Smith, and under the firm name of Smith & Smith this firm has continued in the active practice of the law to the death of its senior member.

On the 17th day of October 1888 Allison O. Smith was united in marriage with Margaret Wallace, young daughter of Hon. William A. Wallace, late United States Senator from Pennsylvania. This union was broken by the death of Mrs. Smith, June 1, 1914. To this marriage four children were born, William Wallace Smith, a member of this bar, Charlotte Opp, intermarried with James T. Gordon, now residing in Orange, N. J.; Margaret Helen, at home and Rebekah Wallace, intermarried with John H. Fulford, residing at Boardman, this county.

Judge Smith was a member of the Clearfield County Bar Association as well as a member of the Pennsylvania Bar Association and of the American Bar Association. He was a member of the Pennsylvania Society of New York and of a number of local clubs and social organizations.

In politics, by conviction and not as a matter of policy, Judge Smith was a Democrat. He served his party as county chairman, as member of its State Central Committee, as Secretary thereof and in other capacities. He served his local community as Burgess and as a member of the school board. He was for a period County Auditor and has been the legal advisor for at least two of our Sheriffs as well as to other county officers.

On March 2, 1923, Allison O. Smith united with the First Presbyterian Church of Clearfield on confession of faith. He came of a Presbyterian family but never had united with the church until that time. He served his church well and was at the time of his death President of its Board of Trustees.

He was one of the organizers of the Clearfield Young Men's Christian Association and for twelve years served as President of its Board of Directors, resigning from that position in 1920 because of failing health. Shortly after retiring from the bench Judge Smith's health became broken. He was attacked by a lingering organic disease. The last years of his life have been constant battle with that disease. As a result of the disease he developed catarrhs on both eyes and his sight gradually failed until he became unable to read ordinary type written matter except with the aid of a powerful magnifying glass. Notwithstanding this serious handicap he continued actively to practice his profession up to the hour when stricken with his last illness.

About three weeks ago his condition became such as to confine him to his bed. The disease apparently not responding to treatment as was hoped it seemed desirable to have him removed to the Clearfield Hospital where he could be constantly under the observation of a skilled physician. But the chance wrought a disappointment. The fight was waged with all the old-time courage and determination but it was a losing fight. Exhausted nature failed to serve power. Day by day anxious friends inquired but received no assurance from the attending physicians. Complications came and with the loss of recuperative and resisting power the end was inevitable. Last Saturday as the day ended and the evening stars came out to shine on the mantle of snow that covered the hills he loved so well the soul of this our friend and brother departed this life for a better, a fuller, a larger life in the land beyond. Such a life is sketched in the life of our brother, Allison O. Smith.

He has lived among us so long that we came to know him well. We came more and more to appreciate his sterling qualities, for he was of that rare class increased knowledge of which brings increased respect and love.

Last Saturday evening when the news of his death became known a hush fell upon this city of his life and manhood activities. Men and women gathered in groups in store, in shop and on street and in subdued tones discussed the loss which had come to this community in the death of this good man. Hushed was the voice of scandal; silent was the tongue of criticism. There was none who dared in this hour of general bereavement, to break in upon the subliminal sorrow with a discordant note. Allison O. Smith had many of the showy qualities that attract the untutored thinking crowd. But he was an able man. He was a clear thinker, a logical reasoner. He was no surface skimmer. In every matter investigated he went immediately and almost intuitively to the root and seized upon the things that were vital.

The outstanding feature of his character was its genuineness. He decided to one, least of all himself. What he appeared to be, that he was. He was honest with himself and toward all men. He never sought to secure favor, place or position by the wiles and arts of the politician. He was no opportunist. He could not play the part of a demagogue. He despised shame. He was genuine.

As a lawyer, he was hard working, capable, reliable, thorough and able. His clients gave him their confidence reservedly, because his character inspired confidence and he deserved it. As a judge, he was patient, careful, painstaking, honest and able. He inspired confidence in litigants and in counsel. His decisions were no always right but they were always honest. We of the bar felt always that we would give a patient hearing and that whatever the decision it would be the honest opinion of a just judge. He was a public spirited citizen. He added in all movements for the betterment of community, state and nation. Interested American, he was naturally intensely patriotic. The people have benefited by the life of this man. I have hearted, aggressive, active and able influence was felt in all matters touching community well being. He owed his home people as an obligation of citizenship but at all for self or grandeur or personal advancement.

He was a Christian gentleman. In church as elsewhere he was a leader. Unhesitatingly yet none the less actively he took his part in the activities of the church of his choice. There will be a sense of loss and genuine sorrow among the people of his church. Yet he was not a sectarian. His Christianity reached out to his brother in need anywhere, everywhere.

In his home he was an ideal husband and father. His son was his companion. His daughters came to him with the troubles and trials of life as their dearest and best friend. Years ago he was bereft by the loss of a wife, who had been to him a companion and help during the struggle of his manhood years. He was in failing health at the time, suffering from that malady that finally caused his death. He never fully recovered from the blow. He took up again the burden of life and in failing health, with undaunted courage carried on to the end. But those who were near to him noticed that something had gone out of his life that was never again to be found there.

Judge Smith outlived the asperities of life. In his later years, by reason of his health, he was withdrawn from the struggles and battles of the actual trial of cases. The antagonisms of political and professional life faded and passed away. He died without enemies—loved of all.

As a mark of respect for the distinguished judge, lawyer and friend

Resolved: That the bar attend his funeral as a body.

Resolved further: That this memorial be spread upon the records of the Court and that a copy duly certified be furnished to the family.

Resolved further: That at a later suitable date a memorial meeting of the bar be held in commemoration of the life of our friend and brother.

Respectfully submitted,

The Philipsburg reserves who were scheduled to play the local High School Seniors' basketball team last evening were forced to cancel on account of the big game between Philipsburg and Bellefonte at the Centre county capital, but will be on hands for the game here tonight.

The Lock Haven Normal school girls' team will play the C. H. S. girls' team tonight at the High School gym. A crusty old sport writer in yesterday's Progress was ungallant enough to refer to the fair Lock Havenites as "older" than our own fair ball tossers. The very idea! No unattached young lady is old, so how could the down river girls be "older" than any other young lady or batch of young ladies. We hasten to apologize for this serious breach; what our reporter wanted to say was "more experienced opponents." "Older!" The very idea again.

HOT BROWN STEW FOR SCHOOL LUNCH

Appetizing Dish for School Lunch.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
An appetizing hot dish that can be served in the classroom for lunch at school is a simple brown stew made of meat and vegetables. The cheaper and less tender cuts of beef can be used, such as the rump and the round. The United States Department of Agriculture gives these directions for making the stew:

Remove the meat from the bone and cut it into small pieces. Drain with flour and cook in a small amount of fat until it is well browned. Add hot water, about one quart to every pound of meat; season with salt, pepper and onion juice; and cook slowly for an hour. The meat should be very tender and the gravy thick. Potatoes, tomatoes, carrots, or other vegetables may be added while the stew is cooking.

TAILS 100 YEARS BEHIND THE TIMES

Is our local jail 100 years "behind what it ought to be?"

Rev. Charles N. Lathrop, secretary of the social service department of the Episcopal church, and author of a pamphlet on jail reform just issued, asserts generally that "the American jail is 100 years behind what it ought to be," and in his book offers a series of practical suggestions for instituting needed reform. Mr. Lathrop is the clergyman who helped to clean up graft-ridden San Francisco. Before that he was chaplain of San Quentin prison in southern California, one of the toughest jails in the country.

"There has been a lot of talk about the evils of our prison system," he says "but little effort to bring it home locally. I refer specifically to our local jails which harbor not only those who have been convicted of offenses, but likewise hundreds who are merely charged with or suspected of crime and even a not inconsiderable number who are detained simply as witnesses. There are cases where as many as 40 per cent of those detained in local jails are not criminals at all, but are merely held for trial or as witnesses against others so held."

Mr. Lathrop doesn't advocate investigation of a jail for the mere sake of investigating. But he does lay it down as fundamental that it is part of the responsibility of Christian citizenship to see to it that the modern jail conforms to twentieth century principles of humanity. His pamphlet is addressed to church organizations without regard to creed or denomination.

Under the heading of "What We Have a Right to Expect From a Jail," the following are listed:

"That the men and women detained have opportunity to be occupied; that adequate compensation be given for work done for the benefit of man and family; that the jail be kept clean, and the men and women have the chance to keep clean themselves; that the women have a woman in charge of them; that the jail be a place not injurious to health; that good reading matter be provided."

In the matter of jail investigation the author takes it for granted that those who undertake the work "will be men and women of mature experience and ordinary common sense. This further practical suggestion is laid down:

"If we plan to assist the jailer and matron, we must realize that we are working for them. The permission we receive to enter the jail demands in return loyal co-operation. To use this permission as a means to spy out inefficiency and to make sensational use of such knowledge is a breach of trust. There is danger, too, of accepting the tale of the inmate without careful proof from other sources, and particularly of taking sides with an inmate against the one in authority."

Quoting Joseph F. Fishman, formerly an inspector of federal prisoners on the attitude of jail visitors toward prisoners, he says: "Do not patronize them or be professionally cheerful. Do not ask them what they are in for, nor the details of their offenses, as this is not considered 'etiquette' in a prison."

"And despite the fact that the pamphlet is issued by a church organization and is intended primarily for the use of church workers, this recommendation is made: 'Above all do not feel that your first duty is to start a Sunday service, and immediately drive the prisoners with church and Bible classes. The only way in which prisoners can be influenced when they are in prison is to drop words of instruction and to drop words of approval among other religious preachers at the prison and approach them in the medium of just or human fellowship'."

BUYING KITCHEN STOVE OR RANGE

Convenient Position Should Be Decided Upon Before Any Selection Is Made.

ALLOW FOR OPENING OF OVEN

Hot-Water Boiler Should Never Be Placed Below Level of Firebox—Floor Should Be Covered With Fireproof Material.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Before choosing a stove or range its proper position in the kitchen should be determined. For the comfort and convenience of the workers the stove is generally placed somewhat apart from the other equipment. Allowance must be made for opening the oven door readily. The oven is usually on the right and the firebox on the left, but in some stoves this is reversed. Where room is limited, an oven door that opens downward instead of to right or left is a convenience.

Room for Water Boiler.

Room must be allowed for the hot-water boiler, if there is one. It need not, however, be placed at the side of the range, but may be suspended from the ceiling, though the horizontal boiler is not so effective as the vertical type.

It must, however, never be placed below the level of the range, as the water will not circulate and heat satisfactorily under this condition. Since a boiler gives off considerable heat, it may be economical sometimes to put it a little distance from the stove and where this heat may be utilized, as for example, in the bathroom, say household specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture.

The floor under the stove or range should be made of or covered with some fireproof material. A built-in base of cement or brick is best, but when this is impossible some use of the composition materials, made of a mixture of cement and asbestos, which can be bought by the square foot, will be well as a protection.

Organizations that committees work in co-operation with jail authorities. The author says: "It ought to be made evident that there is no muckraking motive and no desire to find fault or blame anybody. The thing is to get the facts. If conditions are not ideal, the fault rests primarily, not with the one in charge but with the system itself. A jailer cannot make a good jail out of a bad one or an effective administration with no money. Even though one should feel a jailer quite unfit for his position, the fact that he has the position rests rather with the one who has the power of appointment."

On the question of jail punishment as a crime deterrent Mr. Lathrop quotes a notorious safe blower and most office robber as having said to him on one occasion: "Never interfere with a safe blower. He knows if he is caught that he will get a life sentence. He does not want to kill, but he will kill rather than go to the chair."

Mr. Lathrop asks this question: "Is this an argument against the theory of punishment as a deterrent?" The pamphlet has been read and approved among other religious preachers at the prison and approach them in the medium of just or human fellowship."

tion for the floor and also for the walls back of the stove. Sheets of metal placed directly over wooden walls near the fire box of a stove are not sufficient protection. Some architects recommend a layer of plaster, preferably on metal laths, and separated from the wooden wall by metal furring. As an added precaution, sheet metal should be blocked away from the plaster with metal pieces.

Fuel Is Big Factor.

The kind of cook stove chosen will be determined largely by the available fuel supply, and its also by the amount of work to be done with it. It should be of reliable make, not only to insure good construction but also to make sure that parts can be easily renewed as needed. A larger range than is needed for cooking is often selected in many homes where the kitchen fire is used for cooking and also for heating in cold weather. It would be wiser in many cases to use a liquid fuel stove in winter for cooking purposes or else to have a small range for cooking and additional heater for warming the kitchen in winter, thus saving fuel and avoiding the overheating of the house in summer.

Household Questions

Rub the mud stains from clothing with a raw potato.

Use a red-hot iron for softening the patty to be removed.

Wipe out the bathtub occasionally with a cloth dipped in kerosene.

Spinach and carrots are iron-building vegetables. Don't neglect them.

A crust of stale bread boiled with the cabbage will absorb the disagreeable odor.

If a small piece of soap is added to the stove blackening it will make it stick to the stove.

Beat a pinch of soda into a custard cooked a moment too long and it will entirely change its consistency.

Clean Kidneys By Drinking Lots of Water

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers or Back Hurts

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts can not injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and primary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

Worthy Prayer.

International Conference to Strike at Production of Opium at Its Sources

By DR. R. S. COPELAND, U. S. Senator From New York.

The consumption of opium, from which most of the drugs branch, is amazing. Records show that 780,000 pounds were consumed in one year, equivalent to 6 grains to every man, woman and child in America. We need only between 30,000 and 50,000 pounds for legitimate purposes.

An international conference to strike at the opium production at its source is the surest, swiftest and, in fact, the only effective step to be taken to stop the narcotic drug evil.

I am in favor of the President of the United States calling such a conference at the earliest possible moment. Without all important nations participating in such an agreement the plan would not be effective. And in striking at the evil at its source the plan should include restriction of the acreage devoted to the growth of the poppy in such countries as China, India, Persia and Arabia.

In addition, the United States must limit use of narcotics in this country. The government must supervise rigidly their manufacture and limit the sale of such drugs to properly licensed drug stores and only on the prescriptions of reputable physicians. The United States further must prohibit exporting narcotics and stop smuggling of these same drugs back into this country.

There is a vast distinction between alcohol and drugs. An alcoholic, deprived of alcohol, is a disorganizer. He is insane only while he is using it. A drug addict becomes insane as soon as drugs are taken from him. An addict will plan and execute a crime so atrocious that it cannot be conceived by sane persons.

In our New York list we found that about 10 per cent of the addicts were operators of vehicles. No wonder people are killed. I would recommend that no license be issued to any driver without proper physical examination to make certain that the applicant is not a user of drugs. I feel sure that this would reduce automobile accidents.

Child Labor Cannot Be Consistent With American System of Education

By SENATOR MEDILL M'CORMICK of Illinois.

Figures available indicate that as a result of last May's decision of the Supreme court invalidating the child labor act, the number of children employees in industry has already increased 20 to 30 per cent. Unless congress be empowered by constitutional amendment to act, plainly, matters will grow worse. We have no recourse but to amend the Constitution for the sake of the children who otherwise will be driven into the mills of the country to their own injury.

Child labor, it is obvious, cannot be accepted as consistent with a system of education, free, universal, and compulsory. Obviously a child denied play and forbidden school is refused that physical development and opportunity for learning so important to its citizenship in a democracy. Certainly the nation has an interest in the matter of citizenship. Child labor injures not only the individual child, but it also injures society at large.

It appears that the only formidable opponents of action by congress are those who hold that the national government is now powerless to forbid child labor, and further that under our federal system it ought not to be by constitutional amendment be vested with such powers. But it will be remembered that the Supreme court's decisions have been by narrow margins. The first decision was handed down by a majority of 5 to 4, a majority holding that the federal act of 1916 invaded the rights of the states.

Since the toleration of child labor by any group of states establishes

IRELAND TODAY

President of the Irish Free State

To the Editor of The Progress:
Ireland has come through a revolution. For some years this country was ruled from Dublin Castle. Even the independence claimed for "Grattan's Parliament" (1782-1801) was illusory. Probably no country in the world ever made in such a brief space so much material progress as Ireland made during those few years of legislative freedom. But the control of executive, judiciary and military power remained all the time with Dublin Castle, and Dublin Castle did not wait but contrived the opportunity to destroy Ireland's legislative freedom and concomitant prosperity.

For the time when the discovery of America gave Ireland a place of cardinal importance in the midst of the world until about a year ago, Ireland was dominated by Dublin Castle, and this domination developed in time to such a degree that, in the words of a recent English chief secretary, the whole people of Ireland lived under the Dublin Castle microscope.

Dublin Castle was a bureau of espionage, responsible only to the British government, contemptuous of the Irish people and their representatives, over whom it appointed its own judges and magistrates, its own taxgatherers and police, its own secret service agents.

It was supported by the British army and navy and had its own arm of power and intelligence, the Royal Irish Constabulary, organized on a military footing and equipped with military arms, the most centralized and efficient police that the world has known. Its power can compare with that of any despotism in history.

Within less than three generations, it was able without challenge to exterminate half of the population of Ireland and to stifle most of the people's industries, draining from them the meagre tribute that mounted up in Lord MacDonnell's words, to "an empty's ransom."

The Irish revolution, led by Arthur Griffith and Michael Collins, has ended that. Dublin Castle is no more. Its entire organization has disappeared. The survivors of its great police organization are retired pensioners.

In its stead rules a government elected by the people of Ireland, under a constitution of which the fundamental principle is that "All powers of government and all authority, legislative, executive and judicial in Ireland are derived from the people of Ireland."

So great a revolution was not to be achieved without heavy cost. Among all the wrongs and evils inflicted on Ireland by Dublin Castle, the least was this, that the people were forced to operate after midnight to resist the only law and government that existed until resistance and negotiation became their chief political tradition.

Then came the great year, with its disturbing effects on the public mind throughout the world. Close upon its heels came the final and terrible intense stages of the Irish revolutionary struggle, which became tragically tinted when the representatives of the people, at the beginning of 1919, established a government of their own and openly repudiated competition with the industries of states which more effectively prevent the labor of little children, we know that such competition tends to stifle or retard advanced legislation by the states.

The country has become an economic unit; production in one state is affected by costs and conditions of production in another state. The country is becoming increasingly a social and political unit. Its citizens everywhere must suffer from a continuing injury to its citizens in any part of the union.

joined the Castle bureaucracy and all its authority. The strain, the sacrifices, the enthusiasm and exaltation of that struggle set up an abnormal state of mind among a certain proportion especially of the younger folk whose experience of life meant little to them before the war era of 1914 began.

There is also a graver defect in the new Irish situation than any manifestations however disquieting they may appear, of political paranoia. The British policy of the past has established a separate government in Belfast, subordinate to the British government and parliament, and ruling over an arbitrary fifth area of six counties.

To the Irish people this arrangement stands for continuous irritation and instability, and they look forward to the day when, with full and cordial agreement, Ireland will have a political unity answering to her geographic and economic unity.

Notwithstanding the feeble effects of the two partitions, the Irish revolution is an accomplished fact. The new constitution is operative and the changes that follow from it are being steadily and permanently effected.

A new electoral law, in accordance with the constitution, will secure that future elections will be based on the joint principles of universal adult suffrage and the proportional representation of minorities.

The judicial system is undergoing a complete reorganization to fit the requirements of the Irish people. A new and purely civil police organization has replaced the Royal Irish Constabulary.

A new revenue department will collect the taxes of the Free State. A new army organization will be the instrument of the national will, expressed through the elected representatives of the nation, for the defense of the nation and its institutions.

The far-reaching power of education, the molding of the national mind, is now completely in the hands of the Irish people.

Great Britain there still remains an element hostile to the freedom which Ireland won, and eager to undo it. But the main fact of the situation is that the elected representatives of the nation in both houses of the Oireachtas, the Irish parliament, are practically as one in their determination to maintain that freedom and develop it for every advantage of Ireland, political, economic and cultural.

We have no mind to boast or to prophesy. It is enough to say that we face the future with confidence in the firm purpose of carrying forward to its consummation the policy bequeathed to us by the wisdom, courage and patriotism of Arthur Griffith and Michael Collins.

SAYS CURWENSVILLE

HAS COLIC

I like Township, March 10, 1923.
Editor of Clearfield Progress:
The article appearing in the issue of your paper on March 10th, headed "Curwensville Has Colic," is a protest against the highway department's tearing up the highway and putting me that our infant neighborhood again has the colic and is in need of some soothing syrup. I do not know what the State Highway Department intends to do but I do know that every progressive movement in the handling of the work of the Highway Department in building state roads has found a protest somewhere in the vicinity of Curwensville.

When the B. & P. railroad had a dangerous retaining wall pushing the public road down on the Penna. Railroad, Curwensville said they could not get the B. & P. railroad company to move it or make any repairs. The Highway Department came to the rescue, removed the wall and at this time there is a substantial wall to replace the old one with plenty of ditch line to avoid the possibility of accidents or collisions while traveling on the State road.

When the State Highway was built in their Borough they saw many things to kick about and they could have built a much better road. Now they are calamity howling about what might happen on the public road at Bailey's I have not noticed where anything has been said about a detour as it does not seem to me that the underground will follow the line of the present road and unofficial information received from some of the officials of the State Highway Department is to the effect that a possibility of a detour during the construction of the underground is negligible. Any underground crossing is safer than a grade crossing and is a forward step in the interest of "Safety First" for all concerned.

Everybody thought when the macadamized road was put down at Bailey's it was temporary to accommodate Curwensville people during the time the elimination of Bailey's crossing was being disposed of. Now that it is disposed of, Curwensville is assuming up and so is going to be the case without inquiring into the facts.

This is a bad year for colic and we can understand why Curwensville is beginning early in 1923 to criticize and try to stop progressive movements that will put them on the map and make them become recognized as a real honest-to-goodness village, but it is hoped that weather conditions will soon clear up and when it settles down, Curwensville will get along like big boys and boost instead of KNOCK.

Most Important Point to Be Observed

Is Not to Soak or Cook in Too Much Water.

Most fruits are usually given a long, slow cooking in water before the boiling point. They may be cooked for a few hours, or they may simply be washed and put directly into the water for cooking. The important point to be observed is that the United States Department of Agriculture is not to soak or cook in too much water. The dried product cannot be expected to have as much flavor as does the fresh, so that must be taken to offset that loss. Little as possible.

Meat for cooking dried fruit should be cooked in a large pot of water for a long time. The dried fruit should be cooked in a small pot of water for a short time. They usually contain a great deal of sugar and should be cooked in a small pot of water. They are to be used in puddings, fruit pies and cakes, compotes, etc. etc. etc. and even salads, such as fresh fruits are used.

LEFT-OVER RICE FOR MAKING HOT MUFFINS

Easiest Ways for Disposing of Waste Material.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)
One of the easiest and most palatable ways of disposing of a small amount of left-over cooked rice is to use it for hot muffins or waffles in combination with corn meal or wheat flour, suggests the United States Department of Agriculture.

Rice Waffles.
1 cupful cooked rice, 1 cupful sweet milk, 1 cupful wheat flour, 1 egg, 1/2 teaspoonful salt, 1/2 teaspoonful baking powder, 1/2 teaspoonful butter, drippings, or other fat.

Press the rice through a coarse sieve. Sift the flour, the salt, and the baking powder together, then add the milk, the yolks of eggs, the rice, and the melted fat, and gently fold in the mixture.

3/17/23[4]ch 3/7/23[4]chWAYS FOR UTILIZING
SUPERFLUOUS CRUSTLeft-Over Dough Can Be Made
Into Cakes or Cookies.Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.
In the making of pies a small portion of dough, insufficient for another pie, is frequently left over. This may be utilized in various ways. The following are recommended by household specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture:
Pastry Cakes.
The dough may be simply rolled thin out into squares, sprinkled with sugar and cinnamon, and baked until crisp. These do well to serve with sauce or other dessert, and are more economical of time and money than are most cookies or cake.

Roll pastry until about one-fourth inch in thickness, cover with dried cranberries or with blackberries, raspberries or blueberries well sweetened, sprinkle with flour, and then roll like a jelly roll. Bake in a moderately hot oven until well done. Serve with liquid sauce.

Cheese Straws.
Roll pastry thin, cover with grated cheese or with a highly seasoned soft cheese; fold into thirds and roll again into a thin, long sheet, cut into narrow strips and bake in a hot oven until delicately browned. These are good to serve with salads.A Good Time?
People are always being misinformed; especially the man whose idea of showing a friend a good time is to take him out in a racing car and send him the scene of his life.

Don't neglect that cough. Welch's Glycerole or Tar and Wild Cherry will give relief without harmful dope or alcohol. 25c and 50c.

LESSON FOR MARCH 18

JESUS CRUCIFIED

LESSON TEXT—Luke 23:33.
GOLDEN TEXT—He was crucified for our transgressions. He was praised for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace was upon Him, and with His stripes we are healed.—Isaiah 53:5.REFERENCE MATERIAL—Psa. 22:1, 1 Cor. 15:3, 26, Gal. 6:14.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus on the Cross.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus on the Cross.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Our Salvation Costs.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Meaning of Christ's Death.

We now face the greatest tragedy of all time. No record in the annals of history approaches it. It is the very climax of all history. Though unique in its blackness, from it flows streams of liberty and life for all the world. Let every teacher have the personal experience of Christ's death for him, and then get his pupils to see that Christ's death was instead of their own death.

I. The Place of Crucifixion (v. 33).
They led Him away to Calvary, a hill north of Jerusalem resembling a skull. Calvary is the Latin word and Golgotha is the Hebrew. This is a significant name for the place where man's redemption was accomplished. The skull is an apt picture of man's condition as the result of sin—life and intelligence are gone, leaving only the dark, empty cavern which once contained them. Jesus was not crucified in the city for He was to suffer without the gate (Heb. 13:12).II. His Companions on the Cross (v. 38).
Two malefactors were crucified with Him. Their names are not given. This is a fulfillment of the Scriptures. "He was numbered with the transgressors." (Isaiah 53:12).III. His Forgiving Love (v. 34).
He cried, "Father, forgive them." He doubtless had in mind not only the soldiers who acted for the government, but the Jews who in their blindness were ignorant of the enormity of their crime. He had no hatred in His heart. He yearned for their salvation.IV. The World Revealed (vv. 34-43).
Jesus Christ on the cross is the supreme touchstone laying bare the heart of the world. Take a cross section of the world at any time since Christ was crucified and representative of their classes were found around Jesus on the cross. The cross is the judgment of this world (John 12:31).

1. The Covetous (v. 34). They gambled for His seamless robe. They were under the cross where He was dying. This represents those whose primary interest in Christ is a means to get gain.

2. The Indifferent (v. 35). The people stood beholding. The great mass of the world gaze upon the crucified Christ with stolid indifference.

3. The Scoffers (vv. 35-39). (1) The rulers reviled Him for His claim to being a Savior. They wanted a Savior, but not a crucified Savior. Many today are religious, but have only contempt for a salvation which centers in a blood atonement. (2) The soldiers reviled Him for claiming to be a king. The title, "King of the Jews" had been placed over him in bitter irony, but it was true, for by right of the Davidic covenant He shall be King over Israel (II Samuel 7:12-13). (3) The impudent thief (v. 39). This brutal man joins in reviling the Savior even when He was under condemnation.

4. The Penitent (vv. 40-43). The conscious sinner who discerned the heart of the Savior prayed for mercy. The salvation of this penitent thief is a remarkable picture of the saving power of Christ. The man confessed his sin as against God and cried to Jesus for salvation. He saw that the dying man was the forgiving God. The fact that he acknowledged his sin as against God showed that he was penitent. His request for Christ to remember him when He came into His kingdom shows that he recognized that the one who was dying on the cross was making atonement for sin and that He would come to reign as King. His salvation was immediate. Christ said, "Today shalt thou be with me in paradise."

V. The Death of Christ (vv. 40-46).
So shocking was the crime that nature threw around the Son of God a shroud to hide Him from the Godless crowd. Darkness was upon the land at noonday. When the price of sin was paid He cried with a loud voice showing that He still had vitality—that His death was not through exhaustion but by His sovereign will.Manners.
Manners are the happy ways of doing things.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.Time.
Time devours all human things, and it is but fitting that we should snatch something from it in our turn, which may turn to account in life eternal.—St. Vincent of Lerins.Light From Discussion.
Whoever is afraid of submitting any question, civil or religious, to the test of free discussion, is more in love with his own opinion than with truth.—Blaise Pascal.

TWO TYPES ARE EXPLOITED

KNITTED outerwear has made a new realm in the world of apparel, filled with about everything that women and children wear from head to foot. With the introduction of knitted yard goods, as practical as any woven goods for the making of suits, coats and dresses knitted frocks and suits have forged rapidly to the fore. Silk and fiber silk, mohair and camel hair, all add elements that insure great variety in knitted garments.

Knitted apparel seems properly to belong to the department of sports clothes. Even here it is elaborated so that there are two distinct types of knitted sports wear—the tailored and the fancier types. In the latter class the silk and fiber silk sweaters and coats include stunning models in which one has a feeling of being considerably dressed up in the frocks plain and figured knitted goods are combined, the plain fabric set in, in panels of the superior otherwise introduced in the composition of the garments.

The same classification holds for sweaters; there are the smart, plain, tailored models, with a chic all their own and the more fanciful designs. Just now the plain, tailored type, whether in wool or silk, appears to be the choice of discerning dressers. An example of this type is pictured here. It is to be noted that it blends at the waistline a feature demanded by smart wearers. Its sleeves are plain and very long, with snug-fitting buttoned cuffs, made of a furry wool banding which finishes the neck and the side fastening. It is a one-color affair that looks capable, comfortable and very smart.

Curwensville's Own Column

Mrs. J. K. Kerk and daughter, Mrs. J. K. Johnston and Mrs. William Kerk, all of Curwensville, were in the city attending the great fair last night yesterday afternoon.

One of the high towers on the Cassin road a bucket line which had been used in the Lawhead field was taken down yesterday by the high winds which prevailed during the day. The accident caused suspension of the line and car loading at the railroad. It will require several days to replace the tower, so that operation can be resumed.

Mrs. Wm. H. Robinson passed away at Thursday, March 15th, at her home in Pittsburgh after an illness extending a period of several days. She was well known in Curwensville, having made many warm friends here. Her maiden name was Martha J. Armstrong, her husband being the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Robinson of this place. Mrs. J. P. Robinson and her daughter, Miss Ida Robinson, left yesterday for Pittsburgh to attend the funeral.

A. W. Spencer who is sojourning in Florida, accompanied by Mrs. Spencer, reappeared the employees at the Spencer store by sending to them a box containing choice fruits, nuts, etc. There was a bunch of five grape fruits, attached to a branch just as it had been cut from the tree, which weighed seven and three quarters pounds. A number of large and juicy oranges, several quarts of hamquits (a variety of the orange about as large as a Hickory nut) several pounds of native peaches and several small glasses of jelly made from native fruits. Last Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Spencer spent from 10 o'clock to 12 o'clock in the morning, stopping at St. Petersburg, and in their return over that city, arranged of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Conklin with whom they spent several pleasant days. We are sorry to state, however, that Mr. Spencer's health is not improving very rapidly, and he is of the opinion that the climate of St. Petersburg is better for him than the sunnier climate of northern Florida.

The death of Mrs. Thomas Wilson was announced yesterday having occurred at some point in West Virginia on Thursday. Her body was shipped to arrive in Curwensville this morning to be taken in charge of the funeral director. Doverspike, who will convey it to Glen Richey, her former home. The funeral will be held this afternoon. Interment in Elmwood cemetery. Her age, we understand, is near that of seventy years.

The upper bridge which crosses Anderson creek on road leading to Grapeland was reported to us yesterday by a resident on the south side of the creek, that that structure is in a most dangerous condition for travel and all who are compelled to cross the same. His statement was that his little daughter is passing over the bridge and that it is so shaky that she is severely injured.

In the issue of the Progress Thursday evening there appeared an article bearing on a change in the Cassin highway at or near the John H. Kerk farm. The article seemed to indicate that a tunnel should be built under the present road, bed of the Cassin road, a dangerous crossing for the winter. I interviewed no less than a hundred persons who live in the neighborhood and go over the bridge and they all are strictly in favor of the tunnel. I interviewed a man from a standpoint that the danger to human life would be far less by running through a tunnel than in passing over the railroad bridge as they now do. The majority of Curwensville people are not taken by a long shot, when it comes to a proposition where human life is traveling by automobile, and are protected from death and injury. The few men who are foremost in wanting the change are frightened to be made, are fellows who do not travel over the road once in a while. Hon. Peter Gearhart when asked his opinion yesterday afternoon if the change would be of any great advantage to the traveling public from a safety view, said it would not unless a straight hole could be bored through which the traveler could see clearly from one end to the other. If there was a right curve in the excavation the change would be that there would be no accidents happening under and to every one that has occurred from crossing the tracks as they do now. Another point he made against the change was that the cost would exceed more than the making of three miles of new highway. The greater number of folks who use the highway between this place and Clearfield every day do not desire the change made as the proposition has been presented for their approval but a petition is in preparation and will be presented for signatures, asking the road remain as it is and that no tunnel under the hill be made this year at least.

WOODLAND

Donald Lashberry, Naoma Wheeling, Martha Hull and Cecelia Baker attended the Junior class party at the Clearfield High School last Friday evening.

Miss Maude Gearhart of Clearfield spent Sunday with friends here.

Mrs. Abram Penrose gave a supper at her home on Monday evening in honor of her daughter Kathryn's birthday. Girl friends who were present were Rose Palmer and Celia Baker of Woodland and Martha Stevens of Bigler. Kathryn was very much surprised and they all enjoyed the fine supper and had a very pleasant evening.

A nine-pound girl baby arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Burk Albert Saturday morning.

How many mothers know that there is a baby clinic held in Palmer's hall every other Wednesday afternoon? It is not being very well attended and mothers should not fail to bring their babies each time to be weighed and to receive instruction as to their care and feeding. These clinics are conducted by the state. They are in charge of a trained nurse and are free to all.

Mrs. William Adams and Mrs. Maurice Bush of Bigler visited friends here Thursday.

Mrs. Owen Duffey suffered a severe attack of indigestion Tuesday, but is better at this writing. Mrs. George Meier also was taken seriously ill Thursday but is reported as improving.

A citizens' meeting was held last Friday evening in the Bungalow school building for the purpose of ascertaining why the school board has not made any move toward building a central grade school for Woodland as they were authorized to do by the voters of the township at a recent election. Owing to the meeting not being very well advertised there was a small attendance and only two of the five school directors were present. It is probable action will be taken in the near future to compel the directors to give reason why they have not made a move toward this end. Every one knows how badly we need this building as those now in use are neither sanitary, clean, convenient nor comfortable. It seems impossible to heat them in severe weather and the children have this winter lost a good many days because of this fact and they are getting worse every year.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Wheeling went to Altoona Friday to attend the funeral of the former's sister, who died Wednesday in the Altoona hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Spackman and daughter Ruth of Clearfield visited relatives here Sunday.

Ashley Sault and daughter Jean were Clearfield visitors Friday.

SIMPLE LACE COATS COVER FLATTERING NEGLIGEEES

There is a new and most becomingly simple lace coat, without its underdress of crepe de chine, is doing her best to show how simple it is to fashion a negligee coat out of lace founding. One can see that two lengths of lace are set together, in the first place, and that the upper length is cut, to shape it to the shoulders, and the edges hemstitched together, leaving an opening for the arms. Also it is revealed that the net is rolled and caught with ribbons at intervals, about the neck opening, and that narrow satin ribbon forms bows and ends at the back and ties at the front, and that ribbon loops and ends finished with silk tassels adorn the arm's-eyes.

Coats of lace are worn over various underdresses in charming, easily made negligees. Radigan silk, crepe de chine, georgette, voile, albatross, any of the soft, prettily colored and sheer dress materials will make a foundation for them. Lace adds the charm of elegance to the simplest of them. All the pastel tinted, transparent or semi-transparent cottons are at home with them.

Among the easiest things for the home dressmaker to undertake are these charming negligees. They are simple and inexpensive affairs—when made at home—and are very flattering to their owners. Most of them are cut in kimono fashion and ribbons and laces contribute to their fascinations.

RECIPE FOR COTTAGE CHEESE PIE

Try Some Cottage Cheese Pie.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Blend one tablespoonful of cornstarch gradually with two-thirds cupful of sugar, one cupful of cottage cheese, two beaten eggs, yolks, one tablespoonful butter or melted fat, one-eighth teaspoonful salt, one-fourth teaspoonful vanilla. Bake in a pie shell that has been prebaked for ten minutes or until it begins to color slightly. It must not be brown, or the finished pie will be dark and unpalatable. Bake in a moderately cool oven. When set, cool slightly and cover with a meringue made by adding two tablespoonfuls of sugar to the beaten white of two eggs; one-half teaspoonful of vanilla may be added. Brown the meringue in a slow oven.

METHODS OF HOME DAIRYING

Farm Women Are Reported as Having Made 3,300,000 Pounds of Butter During War.

As a result of 12,000 demonstrations in improved methods of home dairying given by extension agents, farm women are reported to the United States Department of Agriculture as having made according to demonstrated methods 3,300,000 pounds of butter during the year, 1,850,000 of which were sold, and in addition they sold 750,000 gallons of cream.

Pasteurization.

Pasteurization or the treatment of milk to destroy disease germs contained in it was discovered by the great French chemist, Louis Pasteur, the centenary of whose birth was celebrated on December 27, 1922. Nathan Strauss, the New York philanthropist, is well known in connection with the system originated by him in 1880 of distributing pasteurized milk to the poor of New York city.

Foolish Rabbits.

A hare will dart in the path of a giant locomotive at night and run at the rate of sixty miles an hour in the full glare of the headlights and finally drop exhausted. It will never leap from between the rails to a place of safety. The hare pursues the same tactics on the highway when autos are speeding.

THE WINDS OF DEATH

BY E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Copyright, 1922, by E. Phillips Oppenheim
ARTIST: NEA Service, Inc.

BEHIN HERE TODAY

Michael Sayer, noted criminal, was seen by Sir Norman Grey, once of Scotland Yard, when Sayer was in the house of a woman who had been shot dead. Sayer, who was in the house of a woman who had been shot dead, was seen by Sir Norman Grey, once of Scotland Yard, when Sayer was in the house of a woman who had been shot dead.

NOW GO ON WITH STORY

Sir Norman Continues

"I don't think there is the slightest doubt that he is the man who has passed at different times as Thomas Fugate, James Stanfield and originally Michael Sayer. He has vanished from the face of the earth, so far as New York police have ascertained, but they obtained possession of an uncompleted letter which he must have been typing at the time of the raid. The first page he probably destroyed or took a thimble. The second page refers to on. Here is a copy."

Rimington withdrew from his pocketbook a half-sheet of paper and passed it to me. I read it slowly, word for word:

Things have come to their natural end. The last fortnight has been productive, but there is danger in any further prosecution of our energies. There is only one man who stands in the way of my return to London. You know well of whom I speak. I wait day by day for your news of him, and hope to hear of no more. See that the woman you know of, too, is carefully watched. She may be as loyal as she seems, but there are moments when I have my doubts. If N. G. can be disposed of—

"Interest in," I remarked, "very to whom as the letter addressed?" To a firm of leather-brokers in Broadway," Rimington replied, "and it was written on the notepaper of a firm of hide-brokers in New York."

"The letter is from our friend, right enough," I decided. "There have been two attempts upon my life within the last two days, and I have just at a secretary who was keeping a careful note of my doings."

We talked for an hour or more, and arrived without difficulty at a mutual understanding. Rimington undertook to send a good man down from Scotland Yard to make inquiries in the neighborhood, and he promised also to trace my late secretary's antecedents through the office from which she had come. In the meantime, he begged me to return to London with him. The suggestion was not at first altogether attractive to me.

"I don't like being driven away from my own home," I grumbled. "Besides, there will be nothing for me to do in London at this time of the year."

"Grey," he said earnestly, "listen to me: You can play golf round London, and get on with your book. You are far safer there than you would be in an unprotected neighborhood like this. But apart from that, altogether, we want you up there. This wave of crime in New York has ceased. Paris, too, is quieter. The chief of police is impressed with the belief that it is because operations are being transferred to London."

"When do you want me to come?" I asked.

"Back with me tonight," he answered promptly.

"We are," I told him, "What can we do for you?"

The words had scarcely left my lips when I knew that we were in a trap. I realized it just in time to save my life. I struck with all my force at the ugly little black revolver which was thrust almost into my face. There was a report, a sharp pain at the top of my shoulder, and the revolver itself slipped from the man's crushed fingers. I was within an ace of having him by the throat, but he just eluded me. The tourney was now leaving us slowly, and he leaped into his car, leaving his helmet lying in the road. A third man who seemed to rise up from underneath our car, tore along and jumped in behind and they shot forward, traveling at a most astonishing pace. Rimington shouted to our chauffeur through the tube with the idea of pursuing them. We started forward with a series of horrible bumps, and came almost immediately to a standstill. I sprang out. Both our back doors had been stabbed through with some sharp instrument. In the distance, the other car had rounded the corner, and with screaming siren, was racing away for London.

Janet Takes Up the Story:

It was toward the middle of October when I heard from my husband for the first time in many months. For a long time my luck had been atrocious. I lost the greater part of the money paid me for the recovery of Mrs. Trumpington-Smith's diamonds, by an investment in a small millinery business which I discovered, too late, to be already moribund. I had lost post after post for the same maddening reason. My looks had suffered through privation, and my shabby clothes were unbecomingly tattered; but if I had been Helen of Troy herself, I could scarcely have evoked more proposals of the sort which were to bring to an end ordinary relations between employer and employee. My good resolutions began to weaken. I had almost made up my mind to appeal for help in quarters which would necessarily have meant the end of my more or less honest life, when one morning a young man who looked like a bank clerk was ushered shamelessly by my landlady into my bed-sitting room. I was folding up a coat which I was going to take to the pawn broker. I was not in a very pleasant frame of mind, and I was furious with my landlady.

"What do you want?" I asked coldly. "This is not a room in which I can receive visitors."

"My visit is one of business, madam," he answered. "Are you Mrs. Janet Stanfield?"

"I am generally known by that name," I replied.

He opened his pocketbook and counted out two hundred pounds in bank notes upon the table. I watched him spellbound.

"With the compliments of the bank manager," he said as he took up his hat and turned away.

"Who sent the notes?" I called out after him. "What bank is it from?"

"The bank of faith, hope and charity," he answered with a smile. "Good morning!"

He was gone before I could get out so much as another word. I took up the notes greedily. I had done my best to live without my husband's help ever since certain news as to his doings in America had reached me. For some reason which I did not myself altogether understand, I had, I thought, cut myself off from any association with him and his friends. Yet in my present straits my attempt at independence seemed hopeless. The money was a necessity to me.

I paid my landlady, and made her a present of my dilapidated wardrobe. I possessed the art of knowing how and where to buy things, and before lunch-time that day I was installed in a small flat in Albemarle Street wearing clothes which were in keeping with my surroundings and with an evening dress and cloak in reserve. My neck and throat and fingers were bare, for I had seen nothing of my jewelry since our ill-omened adventure in Paris.

"Are you gentlemen going through to London?" he inquired.

"Yes, we are," I answered.

"Good night," he said, and he was gone.

MRS. COFFMAN TILL SEVEN YEARS

Saved from an Operation by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Sidell, Ill.—"I was a nervous wreck. I was suffering from a pain in my left side, which was almost unbearable, and I could not even let the bed clothing rest on my body at night. I had been sick for seven years, but not so bad until the last eighteen months, and had become so run-down that I cared for nobody, and would rather have died than live. I couldn't do my work without help, and the doctors told me that an operation was all there was left. I would not consent to that, so my husband brought me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and begged me to take it. I have taken fourteen bottles of it and I feel ten years younger. Life is full of hope. I do all my household work and have a large garden this year. I never will be without the Vegetable Compound in the house, and when my two little girls reach womanhood I intend to teach them to take it. I am never too busy to tell some suffering sister of my help, and you can use my name and letter to spread the good news of Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine."

culls were watched for four days, but laid no eggs.

Mrs. Kruse kept a record of eggs produced and kept during the year, but did not include those used in the home, which amounted to a good many dozens. The flock has more than paid for a new poultry house built last fall from eggs furnished by the extension agent.

Eggs sold during the year brought $475.30, the old hens sold for $77.90. Several cockerels were sold for breeding purposes, and the rest were marketed while young, bringing in considerable additional money.

Three neighbors who saw Mr. Kruse's poultry house borrowed the plans and built similar one.

In July, 1921, when Mrs. Kruse had 210 hens, she called in the extension agent and with her assistance took "loafers," which were sold at the price was good. A number of neighbors attended the culling demonstration. The egg production was not cut down after the culling. The

The results obtained by Mrs. F. L. Kruse of Clinton County, Iowa, through poultry culling under the direction of the county extension agent should be an encouragement to anyone who may have hesitated to cull the house flock to get rid of "boarder" hens.

Import Half a Million Birds. About 500,000 live birds are imported to the United States every year, including about 1,500 species, of which canaries, parrots and game birds are the most numerous. No birds can be imported without a permit from the department of agriculture, which issues about 400 a year.

FREE STATE HAS EXECUTED SIXTY-SEVEN AND IMPRISONED 13,000 IN ATTEMPT TO SET UP GOVERNMENT IN IRELAND

Only De Valera, Head of Republicans, Still at Large; Expect Him to Be Imposed Soon.

FIRST YEAR CLOSES

Dublin, March 17.—Sixty-seven rebels executed; thirteen thousand imprisoned of which five thousand have been released; two thousand insurgents conducting guerrilla warfare at present; and thirty thousand national troops under arms, hunting from halet to hamlet the last remnant of the rebel army.

The above is the official account of the situation this St. Patrick's Day, announced by the Free State Government as the first year of its rule closes.

The Free State Government is confident it has the situation better in hand than at any time since it was established. Every rebel is being stamped out.

Only E. Valera, President of the "Irish Republic" remains at large. With his eventual capture or flight from the country President Cosgrave is confident an era of peace and prosperity will be born out of Eire's trouble.

INCOME TAX WILL BE CONTINUED BY THE NEXT CONGRESS

Washington, D. C., March 17.—Tax payers' dream of a cut in their income taxes by the new Congress will be rudely shattered.

Despite increased tax receipts Thursday there cannot be any general reduction of income tax rates until the people have helped to reduce the payment on present and past wars.

Leaving tax burdens as idle while eighty-five per cent of the present income continues to go for payment of past wars and keeping prepared for future wars.

A summary of the situation regarding the outlook was made today by Representative Green of Iowa, the next chairman of the Ways and Means Committee.

ADVENT OF SPRING TO BE HELD UP BY BIG COLD WAVE

Washington, D. C., March 17.—Abnormally old weather throughout the United States will precede the theoretical arrival of spring next Wednesday the Weather Bureau foretold.

Beginning tomorrow night a cold wave will blanket the entire United States and will continue until the onset of spring's arrival with frost probably in Florida and along the Gulf Coast. Spring's debut on Wednesday is expected to be the signal for warmer weather, which will continue for two weeks.

TROOPERS ACTIVE AGAINST "SHINERS" AND COCK FIGHTS

Pittsburg, Pa., Mar. 17.—Thirty-two state troopers descended upon the borough of Sharpsburg and Etta today in a wholesale raid on saloons and houses.

The troopers reported sixteen saloons had been raided and in each place they said hard liquor and beer with no touch kick in it was confiscated.

At Chambersburg, Mar. 17.—The biggest police raid in this region was being made today by Lieutenant Snyder. Fifty-five officers and hauled them up before Justice of the Peace Henry of Chambersburg. All of the men were fined for various offenses.

GERMANY SOLICITS AID OF AMERICA IN SETTLING REPARATIONS MUDDLE AND CLEARING UP FINANCIAL TANGLE

Washington, D. C., March 17.—Germany has officially laid her case in the Ruhr crisis before the United States Government. It was learned positively today.

A communication from the Berlin Government outlines in a general way just how far Germany would go to place before Secretary of State Hughes last night by the German High Commission.

40 FRENCH POILUS REPORTED KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK

Berlin, March 17.—Forty French soldiers were reported killed in a train wreck in the Ruhr valley.

According to a dispatch from Frickeheim a French troop train collided with a freight near that city. In addition to the forty soldiers reported dead, many were injured.

The French threw a cordon of troops around the scene of disaster and no person was allowed to go near the wreck, and details were unobtainable. From vantage points outside the cordon, however, it could be seen that many cars in the troop train had telescoped.

PRESIDENT ENJOYS COMPLETE REST ON TRIP TO FLORIDA

Miami Beach, Fla., Mar. 17.—President Harding stated today that this is the most successful vacation he has ever experienced. He has eluded all who sought to break into his change for complete rest. Virtually the only official business has been a request from Secretary of State Hughes for an O. K. on his reply to the Allies on war debt settlement, and a reply sent late last night to Secretary Hoover, who requested the President to issue an executive order permitting the Department to designate a temporary Assistant Secretary of Commerce.

Present plans call for a stop at Palm Beach Saturday night, church there on Sunday after which the party will board the house boat and start the journey to Ormond. Indications are that the President will not make many bay stops. He expects to arrive at St. Augustine March 23 or 24, spend a week there and possibly two or three days at Augusta, Georgia, returning to Washington probably before April 1.

FIFTEEN DEAD FROM THURSDAY CYCLONE IN MISSISSIPPI

Savage, Miss., March 17.—Fifteen persons were reported dead and scores are homeless as a result of a cyclone which crossed northern Mississippi on Thursday night. Scores of homes with the occupants in their nightgowns were deposited in Cold Water River by the storm. Communications with the town have not been re-established.

HOLLYWOOD RID OF BOOTLEGGERS SAY DRY OFFICIALS

Los Angeles, Cal., March 17.—Prohibition officials announced today they had rounded up every bootlegger who had been supplying Hollywood society with liquor. Evidence will be placed before the Grand Jury next week.

Full exposures with confessions of bootleggers were claimed by the police. Bootleggers' client lists and scores of cancelled checks bearing the signatures of customers have been seized.

INFANT CHILD DIES

Percy Morrill Fletcher, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Fletcher, died at the family home on Hillsdale yesterday. The funeral will be held at the Fletcher home Sunday afternoon at 2:00. Rev. Hauser of the Lutheran church officiating.

THREE BOOTLEGGERS BEFORE THE COURT FOR SENTENCE TODAY

Three colored gentlemen who got mixed up with the law over their dealings in contraband liquor were before Judge Bell for sentence yesterday. Archie Kirk, of Doney street, who was arrested as a distributor for George Penn, presented some testimony to show that aside from his appetite for strong drink he wasn't a bad fellow and the court felt disposed to give him another chance. He thereupon directed that he pay the costs in the case and suspended further sentence.

Kirk's partner in crime, Edward or "Curley" Lawson, was not so lucky. He had a lot to say for himself but he didn't say it well, and Judge Bell ordered him back to jail for further investigation after breaking in on his long story by telling Lawson he didn't believe a word he said.

Rufus Kincaids, who was picked up some time ago for catering to the wants of the thirsty at Woodland drew down a $200 fine and cost six months in jail.

Huntingdon Outclassed In Every Particular By Local Basket Shooters

By DICK LEIPOLD
Huntingdon High's basketball team was completely outclassed last evening on the local floor by Clearfield's champs, who rolled up a score of 27 points and held their opponents scoreless during the first half. Not wishing to be guilty of first degree murder, Coach Reed pulled the entire varsity out of the game and substituted the reserve team, as nine men played in the final half who did not start the game.

The game was slow and uninteresting, although it was an impressive sight to watch the first team quickly form their defense, which had the main-liners completely baffled. Huntingdon did not work the ball up the floor for one close shot while the regulars remained in the game.

Being a big heavy bunch, the visitors were able to hold the diminutive Red and Black reserves in check by simply riding the local players man for man. In fact Duncan and Beck Huntingdon giant guards, were regular "wreckers" when it came to holding the cover over their Lilliputian-like rivals. The game ended with the score standing Clearfield 24, Huntingdon 11. Duncan, a guard, and Cornelius, left forward, were the outstanding players for the reformatory town team, ringing up the only field goals. Huntingdon annexed, each of the above men scoring two baskets.

Clearfield's offensive game was far below their usual standard, both varsity and reserve players who in past contests established reputations as goal getters could not locate the hoop last night. Hody and Swede Johnson had eyes for the basket as keen as a customs official's, however, and tallied four times apiece from the floor.

The first five men in the list below played the opening half and the following nine finished the game, Coach Reed shifting them around into no.

CONSUL BEN CHASE IMPROVING

Relatives of Hon. Benjamin F. Chase, United States consul at Messina, Italy, who has been seriously ill in a hospital there, were advised in a telegram from Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes, that "Consul Chase shows considerable improvement and his doctors say that if he suffers no relapse he may be able to leave the hospital in a couple of weeks, but will require rest and further treatment for some time."

James Stauffer, of Burnside, was the guest of local relatives yesterday and today.

BAR PAYS MARK OF RESPECT TO BELOVED JUDGE, ALLISON O. SMITH, WHO DIED AT HOME HERE SATURDAY, MARCH 3rd.

The memorial meeting of the Clearfield County Bar Association called for the purpose of paying final tribute of respect to the memory of the late Judge Allison O. Smith, was held in the court room Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock and was attended by a majority of the members of the Bar, while about three score personal friends of the deceased were also present.

Judge Singleton Bell presided and the occasion was touchingly impressive. After he had called the assembly to order and stated the purpose of the meeting Chairman A. H. Woodward, of the committee on resolutions of the Bar Association, arose and proceeded to read the resolution or memorial prepared by this committee on the death of Judge Smith. The resolution was seconded by R. D. Swoope, Esq., who added a brief but eloquent personal tribute to his late colleague and friend.

Judge Bell then spoke feelingly of his deceased predecessor and he was followed by John F. Short and A. E.

Reed, close personal friends of Judge Smith during all the years of his life in Clearfield.

Highly eulogistic tribute followed by W. C. Pentz, Esq., Hon. A. G. Kramer, Nestor of the Bar, Frank Hutton, W. C. Miller, John B. McGrath, John C. Arnold, H. B. Herwick, Congressman William J. Swoope, Court Crier W. I. Curley, Hon. John W. Reed, and Hon. Frank Snyder. Mr. Snyder presented the record of Judge Smith on the bench, his figures being very interesting and showed that during the ten years Judge Smith presided over the several courts of Clearfield county he heard more than 1100 cases. Of these 37 were appealed to the Superior Court and Judge Smith's decision affirmed in 28 of them, 2 were withdrawn, and 7 reversed. A total of 36 were taken to the Supreme Court of the state and of these 28 were affirmed, 22 not passed or withdrawn and 6 reversed.

The report of the resolutions committee in full follows:—

JUDGE ALLISON O. SMITH

in the Court of Common Pleas of Clearfield County, Pennsylvania. In re-death of Allison O. Smith, No. 1 May Term, 1923.

Report of Memorial Committee To Hon. Singleton Bell, President Judge of the several Courts of the 46th Judicial district of Pennsylvania.

Your committee appointed to prepare a suitable memorial to Hon. Allison O. Smith, a member of this bar and late judge of the courts of this judicial district began to report:

MEMORIAL
Allison O. Smith was born in Limestone Township, Montour County, Pennsylvania, on the twenty-third day of October, A. D. 1857. He died on Saturday, March 3rd, 1923, at about seven o'clock p. m. He was, therefore, aged sixty-five years, four months and twelve days.

He was the second son and third of Simpson and Charlotte (Opp) Smith. The names Simpson and Opp serve to remind us that he was descended from revolutionary stock and was of prominent, not to say distinguished, heritage. From a branch of this same Simpson family of Pennsylvania came that distinguished soldier and president, Ulysses Simpson Grant, while the Opp family has furnished to Pennsylvania distinguished soldiers and citizens in the course of its American history.

During the earlier years of Allison's life his father's occupation was that of a farmer. The family resided on the farm in Montour County until the year 1867, when it moved to Delaware Township, Northumberland County, near Watsonstown, and lived at that place, also on a farm. Later in life the father moved into the town and engaged in the banking business.

The early life of our subject was not different from the life of the ordinary farm boy. He attended the public schools in his neighborhood and lived the life of the normal country boy. Later he attended school at Dewar Academy, Dewar, Pa., and prepared for college there and at Bloomsburg Normal School at Bloomsburg, Pa.

His college career commenced with his entrance into the Pennsylvania State College in January 1876. From that institution he was graduated in 1879 with the degree of Bachelor of Science. His mental equipment and studious habits enabled him to lead his class while at college and he graduated at its head.

During the school year of 1879-80, he was principal of the Watsonstown High School. In the meantime, however, he had been led to select the legal profession as his life work. Accordingly in September 1880 was first him matriculating as a law student at the University of Pennsylvania. During the year 1879 he had registered as a law student in Northumberland County. But on entering the University law school he registered with that firm of distinguished lawyers, Redding, Jones and Carson, of Philadelphia, the junior member of which was the distinguished Hampton L. Carson, late attorney General of Pennsylvania. Graduation from the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania with the degree of L. L. B. came in 1882.

In June 1882 he was admitted to the bar of Philadelphia County, and in September 1882 to the bar of Northumberland County. In the early eighties Clearfield County was being developed as one of the great bituminous coal counties of Pennsylvania. Its population was increasing by leaps and bounds; railroads were being projected into and through the county and its vast wealth was being made available for public use. It was natural for a young man, well equipped and ambitious to seize the opportunity offered for the practice

COMMISSION FOR NEW POSTMASTER CAME YESTERDAY

As Soon As Bond Is Approved C. E. Roseberry Will Relieve Tobias As Local Postmaster.

PROBABLY APRIL 2

Clearfield is about to get its new postmaster and Postmaster Tobias, who asked the Postoffice Department to relieve him of the burdens of the office early last summer will soon be privileged to step out of the place with all its multitude of cares and worries behind him.

Clarence E. Roseberry, who successfully passed the Civil Service examination for the place and who was promptly recommended for the position by Congressman Swoope upon his assuming his office March 3d last, was notified yesterday of his appointment by the Postmaster General as postmaster for Clearfield.

All that is necessary now is for Mr. Roseberry to prepare and present to the Postoffice Department his bond in the sum of $12,000 and upon his doing so and the approval of each and by the department he will be eligible to succeed Postmaster Tobias.

The new Postmaster will take charge of the office on Monday, April 2nd.

BUT TWO CASES OF CONTAGIOUS DISEASE DURING LAST WEEK

But two cases of contagious disease were reported to the Board of Health during the past week, according to records of Secretary Gaulin and both were diphtheria which developed Thursday last. During the week three cases were released from quarantine in the town a total of six cases of contagion. They are located as follows:

First Ward: Diphtheria 1.
Second Ward: Diphtheria 1.
Third Ward: Scarlet fever 2.
Fourth Ward: Diphtheria 1, scarlet fever 1.

REEDSVILLE KNOWS HOW TO GET MOST OUT OF COM-SERVICE

The Reedsville community is one of the sections of Clearfield that is getting full benefit out of Community Service and they are getting that value because they are entering into the spirit of the movement to the fullest extent and not depending on outside help.

Last evening they held one of those regular community parties at the Reedsville home and there were almost three hundred children and adults enjoyed the party. The little folks began arriving about seven o'clock and by eight o'clock they were all engaged in playing childhood games of a wholesome and enjoyable character. The evening was replete with entertainment for both young and old. Gus Mellett being on hand with his radio and many others of the community contributed to the furnishing of entertainment.

A very popular feature last evening was a sort of St. Patrick's Day bash and practically every youngster present shared in the drawing. Cash prizes and don't were served to the kiddies about nine o'clock after which they went home and the evening was given over to the amusements and entertainments appealing more to the adults. Adults were served cakes and coffee.

The party last evening was in charge of Mrs. Samuel Warner, chairman, and Miss Isabel Powell, vice chairman, with a very capable entertainment committee, composed of Miss Elsie Whitall, Aggie Cousens, Helen Bain, Mrs. Vincent Stock, Mrs. Walter Sanders and Mrs. Harvey Keller. The refreshment committee was Mrs. Stanley Mellett, Mrs. Leslie Smeal and Mrs. James Spence. The community is very much interested in the practice of community service.

of law, by a location in this county. Accordingly in September 1882 this young man came—not to locate, but to investigate the possibilities of establishing himself in this county. This investigation led him to remove to Clearfield County in November 1882. He was admitted to the bar of this county in January 1883 and immediately began the practice of his profession here. The first few years were a struggle. A stranger, without business, social or family relations in the county, it could not be expected that a large and lucrative practice would immediately come to the young man. Gradually, however, character, studious habits, strong mental qualities and careful legal training made their impression on the community and county and young Smith came into his own. He had the quality of making fast and durable friendships with the best of our people. He did not have the slow qualities that attract the crowd but the solid attributes of mind and heart that capture and hold the thoughtful and substantial.

Accordingly we early find him selected as the legal advisor of our town Sheriff, R. Newton Shaw, for whom he also acted as a deputy and in a very few years we find that this young lawyer has secured for himself a substantial clientele.

In January 1894 the leading law firm of Clearfield County, the firm of Murray & Gordon was dissolved by the elevation of its junior member, Hon. Cyrus Gordon to the bench. In succession to this firm the law firm of Murray & Smith was formed. This firm consisted of Thos. H. Murray and Allison O. Smith. The firm continued until January 1904 when the junior member thereof, Allison O. Smith was elevated to the bench as President Judge of this judicial district. Judge Smith continued on the bench until succeeded in January 1914 by Hon. Singleton Bell.

Upon his retirement from the bench Judge Smith again took up the practice of law. On Sept. 1st 1917, he associated with himself, his son William Wallace Smith, and under the firm name of Smith & Smith this firm has continued in the active practice of the law to the death of its senior member.

On the 17th day of October 1888 Allison O. Smith was united in marriage with Margaret Wallace, young daughter of Hon. William A. Wallace, late United States Senator from Pennsylvania. This union was broken by the death of Mrs. Smith, June 1, 1914. To this marriage four children were born, William Wallace Smith, a member of this bar, Charlotte Opp, intermarried with James T. Gordon, now residing in Orange, N. J.; Margaret Helen, at home and Rebekah Wallace, intermarried with John H. Fulford, residing at Boardman, this county.

Judge Smith was a member of the Clearfield County Bar Association as well as a member of the Pennsylvania Bar Association and of the American Bar Association. He was a member of the Pennsylvania Society of New York and of a number of local clubs and social organizations.

In politics, by conviction and not as a matter of policy, Judge Smith was a Democrat. He served his party as county chairman, as member of its State Central Committee, as Secretary thereof and in other capacities. He served his local community as Burgess and as a member of the school board. He was for a period County Auditor and has been the legal advisor for at least two of our Sheriffs as well as to other county officers.

On March 2, 1923, Allison O. Smith united with the First Presbyterian Church of Clearfield on confession of faith. He came of a Presbyterian family but never had united with the church until that time. He served his church well and was at the time of his death President of its Board of Trustees.

He was one of the organizers of the Clearfield Young Men's Christian Association and for twelve years served as President of its Board of Directors, resigning from that position in 1920 because of failing health. Shortly after retiring from the bench Judge Smith's health became broken. He was attacked by a lingering organic disease. The last years of his life have been constant battle with that disease. As a result of the disease he developed catarrhs on both eyes and his sight gradually failed until he became unable to read ordinary type written matter except with the aid of a powerful magnifying glass. Notwithstanding this serious handicap he continued actively to practice his profession up to the hour when stricken with his last illness.

About three weeks ago his condition became such as to confine him to his bed. The disease apparently not responding to treatment as was hoped it seemed desirable to have him removed to the Clearfield Hospital where he could be constantly under the observation of a skilled physician. But the chance wrought a disappointment. The fight was waged with all the old-time courage and determination but it was a losing fight. Exhausted nature failed to serve power. Day by day anxious friends inquired but received no assurance from the attending physicians. Complications came and with the loss of recuperative and resisting power the end was inevitable. Last Saturday as the day ended and the evening stars came out to shine on the mantle of snow that covered the hills he loved so well the soul of this our friend and brother departed this life for a better, a fuller, a larger life in the land beyond. Such a life is sketched in the life of our brother, Allison O. Smith.

He has lived among us so long that we came to know him well. We came more and more to appreciate his sterling qualities, for he was of that rare class increased knowledge of whom brings increased respect and love.

Last Saturday evening when the news of his death became known a hush fell upon this city of his life and manhood activities. Men and women gathered in groups in store, in shop and on street and in subdued tones discussed the loss which had come to this community in the death of this good man. Hushed was the voice of scandal; silent was the tongue of criticism. There was none who dared in this hour of general bereavement, to break in upon the solemn mourning with a discordant note.

Allison O. Smith had many of the showy qualities that attract the untutored thinking crowd. But he was an able man. He was a clear thinker, a logical reasoner. He was no surface skimmer. In every matter investigated he went immediately and almost intuitively to the root and seized upon the things that were vital.

The outstanding feature of his character was its genuineness. He decided to one, least of all himself. What he appeared to be, that he was. He was honest with himself and toward all men. He never sought to secure favor, place or position by the wiles and arts of the politician. He was no opportunist. He could not play the part of a demagogue. He despised shame. He was genuine.

As a lawyer, he was hard working, capable, reliable, thorough and able. His clients gave him their confidence reservedly, because his character inspired confidence and he deserved it. As a judge, he was patient, careful, painstaking, honest and able. He inspired confidence in litigants and in counsel. His decisions were no always right but they were always honest. We of the bar felt always that we would give a patient hearing and that whatever the decision it would be the honest opinion of a just judge. He was a public spirited citizen. He added in all movements for the betterment of community, state and nation. Interested American, he was naturally intensely patriotic. The people have benefited by the life of this man. I am heartily glad to see that his influence was felt in all parts of our community and going. He secured his home people as an obligation of citizenship but at all for self or grandeur or personal advancement.

He was a Christian gentleman. In church as elsewhere he was a leader. Unhesitatingly he took the less active part of the church of his choice. There will be a sense of loss and genuine sorrow among the people of his church. Yet he was not a sectarian. His Christianity reached out to his brother in need anywhere, everywhere.

In his home he was an ideal husband and father. His son was his companion. His daughters came to him with the troubles and trials of life as their dearest and best friend. Years ago he was bereft by the loss of a wife, who had been to him a companion and help during the struggle of his manhood years. He was in failing health at the time, suffering from that malady that finally caused his death. He never fully recovered from the blow. He took up again the burden of life and in failing health, with undaunted courage carried on to the end. But those who were near to him noticed that something had gone out of his life that was never again to be found there.

Judge Smith outlived the appetites of life. In his later years, by reason of his health, he was withdrawn from the struggles and battles of the actual trial of cases. The antagonisms of political and professional life faded and passed away. He died without enemies—loved of all.

As a mark of respect for the distinguished judge, lawyer and friend

Resolved: That the bar attend his funeral as a body.

Resolved further: That this memorial be spread upon the records of the Court and that a copy duly certified be furnished to the family.

Resolved further: That at a later suitable date a memorial meeting of the bar be held in commemoration of the life of our friend and brother.

Respectfully submitted,

The Philipsburg reserves who were scheduled to play the local High School Seniors' basketball team last evening were forced to cancel on account of the big game between Philipsburg and Bellefonte at the Centre county capital, but will be on hands for the game here tonight.

The Lock Haven Normal school girls' team will play the C. H. S. girls' team tonight at the High School gym. A crusty old sport writer in yesterday's Progress was ungallant enough to refer to the fair Lock Havenites as "older" than our own fair ball tossers. The very idea! No unattached young lady is old, so how could the down river girls be "older" than any other young lady or batch of young ladies. We hasten to apologize for this serious breach; what our reporter wanted to say was "more experienced opponents." "Older!" The very idea again.

HOT BROWN STEW FOR SCHOOL LUNCH

Appetizing Dish for School Lunch.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
An appetizing hot dish that can be served in the classroom for lunch at school is a simple brown stew made of meat and vegetables. The cheaper and less tender cuts of beef can be used, such as the rump and the round. The United States Department of Agriculture gives these directions for making the stew:

Remove the meat from the bone and cut it into small pieces. Drain with flour and cook in a small amount of fat until it is well browned. Add hot water, about one quart to every pound of meat; season with salt, pepper and onion juice; and cook slowly for an hour. The meat should be very tender and the gravy thick. Potatoes, tomatoes, carrots, or other vegetables may be added while the stew is cooking.

Don for the four and also for the walls back of the stove. Sheets of metal placed directly over wooden walls near the fire box of a stove are not sufficient protection. Some architects recommend a layer of plaster, preferably on metal laths, and separated from the wooden wall by metal furring. As an added precaution, sheet metal should be blocked away from the plaster with metal pieces.

Fuel Is Big Factor.

The kind of cook stove chosen will be determined largely by the available fuel supply, and its also by the amount of work to be done with it. It should be of reliable make, not only to insure good construction but also to make sure that parts can be easily renewed as needed. A larger range than is needed for cooking is often selected in many homes where the kitchen fire is used for cooking and also for heating in cold weather. It would be wiser in many cases to use a liquid fuel stove in winter for cooking purposes or else to have a small range for cooking and additional heater for warming the kitchen in winter, thus saving fuel and avoiding the overheating of the house in summer.

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

TAILS 100 YEARS BEHIND THE TIMES

Is our local jail 100 years "behind what it ought to be?"

Rev. Charles N. Lathrop, secretary of the social service department of the Episcopal church, and author of a pamphlet on jail reform just issued, asserts generally that "the American jail is 100 years behind what it ought to be," and in his book offers a series of practical suggestions for instituting needed reform. Mr. Lathrop is the clergyman who helped to clean up graft-ridden San Francisco. Before that he was chaplain of San Quentin prison in southern California, one of the toughest jails in the country.

"There has been a lot of talk about the evils of our prison system," he says "but little effort to bring it home locally. I refer specifically to our local jails which harbor not only those who have been convicted of offenses, but likewise hundreds who are merely charged with or suspected of crime and even a not inconsiderable number who are detained simply as witnesses. There are cases where as many as 40 per cent of those detained in local jails are not criminals at all, but are merely held for trial or as witnesses against others so held."

Mr. Lathrop doesn't advocate investigation of a jail for the mere sake of investigating. But he does lay it down as fundamental that it is part of the responsibility of Christian citizenship to see to it that the modern jail conforms to twentieth century principles of humanity. His pamphlet is addressed to church organizations without regard to creed or denomination.

Under the heading of "What We Have a Right to Expect From a Jail," the following are listed:

"That the men and women detained have opportunity to be occupied; that adequate compensation be given for work done for the benefit of man and family; that the jail be kept clean, and the men and women have the chance to keep clean themselves; that the women have a woman in charge of them; that the jail be a place not injurious to health; that good reading matter be provided."

In the matter of jail investigation the author takes it for granted that those who undertake the work "will be men and women of mature experience and ordinary common sense. This further practical suggestion is laid down:

"If we plan to assist the jailer and matron, we must realize that we are working for them. The permission we receive to enter the jail demands in return loyal co-operation. To use this permission as a means to spy out inefficiency and to make sensational use of such knowledge is a breach of trust. There is danger, too, of accepting the tale of the inmate without careful proof from other sources, and particularly of taking sides with an inmate against the one in authority."

Quoting Joseph F. Fishman, formerly an inspector of federal prisoners on the attitude of jail visitors toward prisoners, he says: "Do not patronize them or be professionally cheerful. Do not ask them what they are in for, nor the details of their offenses, as this is not considered 'etiquette' in a prison."

"And despite the fact that the pamphlet is issued by a church organization and is intended primarily for the use of church workers, this recommendation is made: "Above all do not feel that your first duty is to start a Sunday service, and immediately drive the prisoners with church and Bible classes. The only way in which prisoners can be influenced when they are in prison is to drop words of instruction and to drop words of approval among other religious preachers."

The pamphlet has been read and approved among other religious preachers at the Clearfield and approved among other religious preachers at the Clearfield and approved among other religious preachers at the Clearfield.

BUYING KITCHEN STOVE OR RANGE

Convenient Position Should Be Decided Upon Before Any Selection Is Made.

ALLOW FOR OPENING OF OVEN

Hot-Water Boiler Should Never Be Placed Below Level of Firebox—Floor Should Be Covered With Fireproof Material.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Before choosing a stove or range its proper position in the kitchen should be determined. For the comfort and convenience of the workers the stove is generally placed somewhat apart from the other equipment. Allowance must be made for opening the oven door readily. The oven is usually on the right and the firebox on the left, but in some stoves this is reversed. Where room is limited, an oven door that opens downward instead of to right or left is a convenience.

Kitchen Range Conveniently Located.

Room for Water Boiler.

Room must be allowed for the hot-water boiler, if there is one. It need not, however, be placed at the side of the range, but may be suspended from the ceiling, though the horizontal boiler is not so effective as the vertical type. It must, however, never be placed below the level of the range, as the water will not circulate and heat satisfactorily under this condition. Since a boiler gives off considerable heat, it may be economical sometimes to put it a little distance from the stove and where this heat may be utilized, as for example, in the bathroom, say household specialists of United States Department of Agriculture.

The floor under the stove or range should be made of or covered with some fireproof material. A built-in base of cement or brick is best, but when this is impossible some use of the composition materials, made of a mixture of cement and asbestos, which can be bought by the square foot, will do well as a protection.

Organizations that committees work in co-operation with jail authorities. The author says: "It ought to be made evident that there is no muckraking motive and no desire to find fault or blame anybody. The thing is to get the facts. If conditions are not ideal, the fault rests primarily, not with the one in charge but with the system itself. A jailer cannot make a good jail out of a bad one or an effective administration with no money. Even though one should feel a jailer quite unfit for his position, the fact that he has the position rests rather with the one who has the power of appointment."

On the question of jail punishment as a crime deterrent Mr. Lathrop quotes a notorious safe blower and most office robber as having said to him on one occasion: "Never interfere with a safe blower. He knows if he is caught that he will get a life sentence. He does not want to kill, but he will kill rather than go to the chair."

Mr. Lathrop asks this question: "Is this an argument against the theory of punishment as a deterrent?" The pamphlet has been read and approved among other religious preachers at the Clearfield and approved among other religious preachers at the Clearfield.

Clean Kidneys By Drinking Lots of Water

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers or Back Hurts

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts can not injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and primary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

International Conference to Strike at Production of Opium at Its Sources

By DR. R. S. COPELAND, U. S. Senator From New York.

The consumption of opium, from which most of the drugs branch, is amazing. Records show that 780,000 pounds were consumed in one year, equivalent to 6 grains to every man, woman and child in America. We need only between 30,000 and 50,000 pounds for legitimate purposes.

An international conference to strike at the opium production at its source is the surest, swiftest and, in fact, the only effective step to be taken to stop the narcotic drug evil.

I am in favor of the President of the United States calling such a conference at the earliest possible moment. Without all important nations participating in such an agreement the plan would not be effective. And in striking at the evil at its source the plan should include restriction of the acreage devoted to the growth of the poppy in such countries as China, India, Persia and Arabia.

In addition, the United States must limit use of narcotics in this country. The government must supervise rigidly their manufacture and limit the sale of such drugs to properly licensed drug stores and only on the prescriptions of reputable physicians. The United States further must prohibit exporting narcotics and stop smuggling of these same drugs back into this country.

There is a vast distinction between alcohol and drugs. An alcoholic, deprived of alcohol, is a disorganizer. He is insane only while he is using it. A drug addict becomes insane as soon as drugs are taken from him. An addict will plan and execute a crime so atrocious that it cannot be conceived by sane persons.

In our New York list we found that about 10 per cent of the addicts were operators of vehicles. No wonder people are killed. I would recommend that no license be issued to any driver without proper physical examination to make certain that the applicant is not a user of drugs. I feel sure that this would reduce automobile accidents.

Child Labor Cannot Be Consistent With American System of Education

By SENATOR MEDILL M'CORMICK of Illinois.

Figures available indicate that as a result of last May's decision of the Supreme court invalidating the child labor act, the number of children employees in industry has already increased 20 to 30 per cent. Unless congress be empowered by constitutional amendment to act, plainly, matters will grow worse. We have no recourse but to amend the Constitution for the sake of the children who otherwise will be driven into the mills of the country to their own injury.

Child labor, it is obvious, cannot be accepted as consistent with a system of education, free, universal, and compulsory. Obviously a child denied play and forbidden school is refused that physical development and opportunity for learning so important to its citizenship in a democracy. Certainly the nation has an interest in the matter of citizenship. Child labor injures not only the individual child, but it also injures society at large.

It appears that the only formidable opponents of action by congress are those who hold that the national government is now powerless to forbid child labor, and further that under our federal system it ought not to be by constitutional amendment be vested with such powers. But it will be remembered that the Supreme court's decisions have been by narrow margins. The first decision was handed down by a majority of 5 to 4, a majority holding that the federal act of 1916 invaded the rights of the states.

Since the toleration of child labor by any group of states establishes

IRELAND TODAY

PRESIDENT COSGRAVE

To the Editor of The Progress:
Ireland has come through a revolution. For some years this country was ruled from Dublin Castle. Even the independence claimed for "Grattan's Parliament" (1782-1801) was illusory. Probably no country in the world ever made in such a brief space so much material progress as Ireland made during those few years of legislative freedom. But the control of executive, judiciary and military power remained all the time with Dublin Castle, and Dublin Castle did not wait but contrived the opportunity to destroy Ireland's legislative freedom and concomitant prosperity.

For the time when the discovery of America gave Ireland a place of cardinal importance in the midst of the world until about a year ago, Ireland was dominated by Dublin Castle, and this domination developed in time to such a degree that, in the words of a recent English chief secretary, the whole people of Ireland lived under the Dublin Castle microscope.

Dublin Castle was a bureau of espionage, responsible only to the British government, contemptuous of the Irish people and their representatives, over whom it appointed its own judges and magistrates, its own taxgatherers and police, its own secret service agents.

It was supported by the British army and navy and had its own arm of power and intelligence, the Royal Irish Constabulary, organized on a military footing and equipped with military arms, the most centralized and efficient police that the world has known. Its power can compare with that of any despotism in history.

Within less than three generations, it was able without challenge to exterminate half of the population of Ireland and to stifle most of the people's industries, draining from them the meagre tribute that mounted up in Lord MacDonnell's words, to "an empty's ransom."

The Irish revolution, led by Arthur Griffith and Michael Collins, has ended that. Dublin Castle is no more. Its entire organization has disappeared. The survivors of its great police organization are retired pensioners.

In its stead rules a government elected by the people of Ireland, under a constitution of which the fundamental principle is that "All powers of government and all authority, legislative, executive and judicial in Ireland are derived from the people of Ireland."

So great a revolution was not to be achieved without heavy cost. Among all the wrongs and evils inflicted on Ireland by Dublin Castle, the least was this, that the people were forced to operate after midnight to resist the only law and government that existed until resistance and negotiation became their chief political tradition.

Then came the great year, with its disturbing effects on the public mind throughout the world. Close upon it came the final and terrible intense stages of the Irish revolutionary struggle, which became tragically tinted when the representatives of the people, at the beginning of 1919, established a government of their own and openly repudiated competition with the industries of states which more effectively prevent the labor of little children, we know that such competition tends to stifle or retard advanced legislation by the states.

The country has become an economic unit; production in one state is affected by costs and conditions of production in another state. The country is becoming increasingly a social and political unit. Its citizens everywhere must suffer from a continuing injury to its citizens in any part of the union.

PRESIDENT COSGRAVE

Notwithstanding the feeble effects of the two revolutions, the Irish revolution is an accomplished fact. The new constitution is operative and the changes that follow from it are being steadily and permanently effected.

A new electoral law, in accordance with the constitution, will secure that future elections will be held under the joint principles of universal adult suffrage and the proportional representation of minorities.

The judicial system is undergoing a complete reorganization to the requirements of the Irish people.

A new and purely civil police organization has replaced the Royal Irish Constabulary.

A new revenue department will collect the taxes of the Free State.

A new army organization will be the instrument of the national will, expressed through the elected representatives of the nation, for the defense of the nation and its institutions.

The far-reaching power of education, the molding of the national mind, is now completely in the hands of the Irish people.

Great Britain there still remains an element hostile to the new Ireland in certain sections of the press, hostile to the freedom which Ireland won, and eager to undo it.

But the main fact of the situation is that the elected representatives of the nation in both houses of the Oireachtas, the Irish parliament, are practically as one in their determination to maintain that freedom and develop it for every advantage of Ireland, political, economic and cultural.

We have no mind to boast or to prophesy. It is enough to say that we face the future with confidence in the firm purpose of carrying forward to us by the wisdom, courage and patriotism of Arthur Griffith and Michael Collins.

joined the Castle bureaucracy and all its authority. The strain, the sacrifices, the enthusiasm and exaltation of that struggle set up an abnormal state of mind among a certain proportion especially of the younger folk whose experience of life meant little to them before the war era of 1914 began.

There is also a graver defect in the new Irish situation than any manifestations showed, and that is the possibility of political fanaticism. The British policy of the past has established a separate government in Belfast, subordinate to the British government and parliament, and ruling over an arbitrary area of six counties.

To the Irish people this arrangement stands for continuous irritation and instability, and they look forward to the day when, with full and cordial agreement, Ireland will have a political unity.

Notwithstanding the feeble effects of the two revolutions, the Irish revolution is an accomplished fact. The new constitution is operative and the changes that follow from it are being steadily and permanently effected.

SAYS CURWENSVILLE HAS COLIC

I. K. Township, March 10, 1923.

Editor of Clearfield Progress:

The article appearing in the issue of your paper on March 10th, headed "Curwensville Has Colic," is a very interesting one. It is a pity that the article is so long and so full of errors.

Teasing up the highways reminds me that our infant newspaper again has the colic and is in need of some soothing syrup. I do not know what the State Highway Department intends to do but I do know that every progressive movement in the handling of the work of the Highway Department in building state roads has found a protest somewhere in the vicinity of Curwensville.

When the B. & P. railroad had a dangerous retaining wall pushing the public road down on the Penna. Railroad, Curwensville said they could not get the B. & P. railroad company to move it or make any repairs. The Highway Department came to the rescue, removed the wall and at this time there is a substantial wall to replace the old one with plenty of ditch line to avoid the possibility of accidents or collisions while traveling on the State road.

When the State Highway was built in their Borough they saw many things to kick about and they could have built a much better road. Now they are calamity howling about what might happen on the public road at Bailey's I have not noticed where anything has been said about a detour as it does not seem to me that the underground will follow the line of the present road and unofficial information received from some of the officials of the State Highway Department is to the effect that a possibility of a detour during the construction of the underground is negligible. Any underground crossing is safer than a grade crossing and is a forward step in the interest of "Safety First" for all concerned.

Everybody thought when the macadamized road was put down at Bailey's it was temporary to accommodate Curwensville people during the time the elimination of Bailey's crossing was being disposed of. Now that it is disposed of, Curwensville is assuming up and so is going to be the case without inquiring into the facts.

This is a bad year for colic and we can understand why Curwensville is beginning early in 1923 to criticize and try to stop progressive movements that will put them on the map and make them become recognized as a real honest-to-goodness village, but it is hoped that weather conditions will soon clear up and when it settles down, Curwensville will get along like big boys and boost instead of KNOCK.

Most Important Point to Be Observed Is Not to Soak or Cook in Too Much Water.

Dried fruits are usually given a long, slow cooking in water before the boiling point. They may be soaked for a few hours, or they may simply be washed and put directly into the water for cooking. The important point to be observed is that the United States Department of Agriculture is not to soak or cook in too much water. The dried product cannot be expected to have as much flavor as does the fresh, so some must be taken to offset that. It is little as possible.

For cooking dried fruit, a quart of water for each cup of fruit is a good rule. If equal measures of water and fruit be used, the cooking is done in a very short time. Dried fruit must be soaked in water with sugar or with any sort of syrup. They usually contain a great deal of sugar themselves. They are to be soaked in water, in pudding, fruit pies and cakes, compotes, etc., as they are, and even soaked, much as fresh fruits are used.

WAYS FOR UTILIZING SUPERFLUOUS CRUST

Left-Over Dough Can Be Made Into Cakes or Cookies.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.
In the making of pies a small portion of dough, insufficient for another pie, is frequently left over. This may be utilized in various ways. The following are recommended by household specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture:
Pastry Crisps.
The dough may be simply rolled thin out into squares, sprinkled with sugar and cinnamon, and baked until crisp. These do well to serve with sauce or other dessert, and are more economical of time and money than are most cookies or cake.

LESSON FOR MARCH 18

JESUS CRUCIFIED

LESSON TEXT—Luke 23:33.
GOLDEN TEXT—He was crucified for our transgressions. He was praised for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace was upon Him, and with His stripes we are healed.—Isaiah 53:5.REFERENCE MATERIAL—Psa. 22:1-4; 1 Cor. 15:2, 3; Gal. 3:13.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus on the Cross.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus on the Cross.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Our Salvation Costs.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Meaning of Christ's Death.

We now face the greatest tragedy of all time. No record in the annals of history approaches it. It is the very climax of all history. Though unique in its blackness, from it flows streams of liberty and life for all the world. Let every teacher have the personal experience of Christ's death for him, and then get his pupils to see that Christ's death was instead of their own death.

I. The Place of Crucifixion (v. 33). They led Him away to Calvary, a hill north of Jerusalem resembling a skull. Calvary is the Latin word and Golgotha is the Hebrew. This is a significant name for the place where man's redemption was accomplished. The skull is an apt picture of man's condition as the result of sin—life and intelligence are gone, leaving only the dark, empty cavern which once contained them. Jesus was not crucified in the city for He was to suffer without the gate (Heb. 13:12).

II. His Companions on the Cross (v. 38). Two malefactors were crucified with Him. Their names are not given. This is a fulfillment of the Scriptures. "He was numbered with the transgressors." (Isaiah 53:12).

III. His Forgiving Love (v. 34). He cried, "Father, forgive them." He doubtless had in mind not only the soldiers who acted for the government, but the Jews who in their blindness were ignorant of the enormity of their crime. He had no hatred in His heart. He yearned for their salvation.

IV. The World Revealed (vv. 34-43). Jesus Christ on the cross is the supreme touchstone laying bare the heart of the world. Take a cross section of the world at any time since Christ was crucified and representative of their classes were found around Jesus on the cross. The cross is the judgment of this world (John 12:31).

1. The Covetous (v. 34). They gambled for His seamless robe. He died under the cross where He was dying. This represents those whose primary interest in Christ is a means to get gain.

2. The Indifferent (v. 35). The people stood beholding. The great mass of the world gaze upon the crucified Christ with stolid indifference.

3. The Scoffers (vv. 35-39). (1) The rulers reviled Him for His claim to being a Savior. They wanted a Savior, but not a crucified Savior. Many today are religious, but have only contempt for a salvation which centers in a blood atonement. (2) The soldiers reviled Him for claiming to be a king. The title, "King of the Jews" had been placed over him in bitter irony, but it was true, for by right of the Davidic covenant He shall be King over Israel (II Samuel 7:12-13). (3) The impudent thief (v. 39). This brutal man joins in reviling the Savior even when He was under condemnation.

4. The Penitent (vv. 40-43). The conscious sinner who discerned the heart of the Savior prayed for mercy. The salvation of this penitent thief is a remarkable picture of the saving power of Christ. The man confessed his sin as against God and cried to Jesus for salvation. He saw that the dying man was the forgiving God. The fact that he acknowledged his sin as against God showed that he was penitent. His request for Christ to remember him when He came into His kingdom shows that he recognized that the one who was dying on the cross was making atonement for sin and that He would come to reign as King. His salvation was immediate. Christ said, "Today shalt thou be with me in paradise."

V. The Death of Christ (vv. 40-46). So shocking was the crime that nature threw around the Son of God a shroud to hide Him from the Godless crowd. Darkness was upon the land at noonday. When the price of sin was paid He cried with a loud voice showing that He still had vitality—that His death was not through exhaustion but by His sovereign will.

Manners.

Manners are the happy ways of doing things.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Time.

Time devours all human things, and it is but fitting that we should snatch something from it in our turn, which may turn to account in life eternal.—St. Vincent of Lerins.

Light From Discussion.

Whoever is afraid of submitting any question, civil or religious, to the test of free discussion, is more in love with his own opinion than with truth.—Blaise Pascal.

IN KNITTED SPORTSWEAR

TWO TYPES ARE EXPLOITED

The new realm in the world of apparel, filled with about everything that women and children wear from head to foot. With the introduction of knitted yard goods, as practical as any woven goods for the making of suits, coats and dresses knitted frocks and suits have forged rapidly to the fore. Silk and fiber silk, mohair and camel hair, all add elements that insure great variety in knitted garments.

Knitted apparel seems properly to belong to the department of sports clothes. Even here it is elaborated so that there are two distinct types of knitted sports wear—the tailored and the fancier types. In the latter class the silk and finer silk sweaters and coats include stunning models in which one has a feeling of being considerably dressed up in the frocks plain and figured knitted goods are combined, the plain fabric set in, in panels of the superior otherwise introduced in the composition of the garments.

The same classification holds for sweaters; there are the smart, plain, tailored models, with a chic all their own and the more fanciful designs. Just now the plain, tailored type, whether in wool or silk, appears to be the choice of discerning dressers. An example of this type is pictured here. It is to be noted that it blossoms at the waistline—a feature demanded by smart wearers. Its sleeves are plain and very long, with snug-fitting buttoned cuffs, made of a furry wool banding which finishes the neck and the side fastening. It is a one-color affair that looks capable, comfortable and very smart.

BEHIN HERE TODAY

Michael Sayer, noted criminal, was seen by Sir Norman Grey, once of Scotland Yard, when Sayer was in the act of shooting an officer and a constable. Sayer, who is now in the hands of the law, is a man of many guises. He is a man of many guises. He is a man of many guises.

While Sir Norman is living at his country house, Greys Manor, he is a man of many guises. He is a man of many guises. He is a man of many guises.

NOW GO ON WITH STORY

Sir Norman Continues

"I don't think there is the slightest doubt that he is the man who has passed at different times as Thomas Fugate, James Stanfield and originally Michael Sayer. He has vanished from the face of the earth, so far as New York police have ascertained. But they obtained possession of an uncompleted letter which he must have been typing at the time of the raid. The first page he probably destroyed or took a thimble. The second page refers to on. Here is a copy."

Rimington withdrew from his pocketbook a half-sheet of paper and passed it to me. I read it slowly, word for word:

Things have come to their natural end. The last fortnight has been productive, but there is danger in any further prosecution of our energies. There is only one man who stands in the way of my return to London. You know well of whom I speak. I wait day by day for your news of him, and hope to hear of no more. See that the woman you know of, too, is carefully watched. She may be as loyal as she seems, but there are moments when I have my doubts. If N. G. can be disposed of—

"Interest me," I remarked. "Very. To whom is the letter addressed?"

"To a firm of leather-brokers in New York," Rimington replied. "And it was written on the note-paper of a firm of hide-brokers in New York."

"The letter is from your friend, right enough," I decided. "There have been two attempts upon my life within the last two days, and I have just at a secretary who was keeping a careful note of my doings."

"We talked for an hour or more, and arrived without difficulty at a mutual understanding. Rimington undertook to send a good man down from Scotland Yard to make inquiries in the neighborhood, and he promised also to trace my late secretary's antecedents through the office from which she had come. In the meantime, he begged me to return to London with him. The suggestion was not at first altogether attractive to me."

"I don't like being driven away from my own home," I grumbled. "Besides, there will be nothing for me to do in London at this time of the year."

"Grey," he said earnestly, "listen to me: You can play golf round London, and get on with your book. You are far safer there than you would be in an unprotected neighborhood like this. But apart from that, altogether, we want you up there. This wave of crime in New York has ceased. Paris, too, is quieter. The police are being transferred to London."

"When do you want me to come?" I asked.

"Back with the tonight," he answered promptly.

I HAD TOLD RIMINGTON OF ALL THE material things which had happened to me down at Greys Manor, but I had not spoken of that curious sense of impending evil which had clouded my days and the presence of which had been so remarkably verified. We were scarcely crossing the first stretch of Exmoor, however, when the memory of it came back to me, and with it memory of an overpowering return of the feeling itself. I filled a pipe, stretched myself out in a corner of the car, and set myself to fight this sin of fear.

It was no easy matter, however. All through the night I was haunted with fancies. The gorse-bushes on the moors seemed like crouching men, the whistle from a distant railway station a warning of impending danger. In a small village before we arrived at Taunton, a man stood in the open doorway of his house, looking out at the night. He scanned us as we passed, and turned away through the uncurtained window of

Janet Takes Up the Story:

"I was toward the middle of October when I heard from my husband for the first time in many months. For a long time my luck had been atrocious. I lost the greater part of the money paid me for the recovery of Mrs. Trumpington-Smith's diamonds, by an investment in a small millinery business which I discovered, too late, to be already moribund. I had lost post after post for the same maddening reason. My looks had suffered through privation, and my shabby clothes were unbecomingly tattered; but if I had been Helen of Troy herself, I could scarcely have evoked more proposals of the sort which were brought to an end by my relations between employer and employee. My good resolutions began to weaken. I had almost made up my mind to appeal for help in quarters which would necessarily have meant the end of my more or less honest life, when one morning a clerk was ushered shamelessly by my landlady into my bed-sitting room. I was folding up a coat which I was going to take to the pawnbroker. I was not in a very pleasant frame of mind, and I was furious with my landlady."

"What do you want?" I asked coldly. "This is not a room in which I can receive visitors."

"My visit is one of business, madam," he answered. "Are you Mrs. Janet Stanfield?"

"I am generally known by that name," I replied.

He opened his pocketbook and counted out two hundred pounds in bank notes upon the table. I watched him spellbound.

"With the compliments of the bank manager," he said as he took up his hat and turned away. "Who sent the notes?" I called out after him. "What bank is it from?"

"The bank of faith, hope and charity," he answered with a smile. "Good morning!"

He was gone before I could get out so much as another word. I took up the notes greedily. I had done my best to live without my husband's help ever since certain news as to his doings in America had reached me. For some reason which I did not myself altogether understand, I had, I thought, cut myself off from any association with him and his friends. Yet in my present straits my attempt at independence seemed hopeless. The money was a necessity to me.

I paid my landlady, and made her a present of my dilapidated wardrobe. I possessed the art of knowing how and where to buy things, and before long-time that day I was installed in a small flat in Albemarle Street wearing clothes which were in keeping with my surroundings and with an evening dress and cloak in reserve. My neck and throat and fingers were bare, for I had seen nothing of my jewelry since our ill-omened adventure in Paris.

"Are you gentlemen going through to London?" he inquired.

Import Half a Million Birds.

About 500,000 live birds are imported to the United States every year, including about 1,500 species, of which canaries, parrots and game birds are the most numerous. No birds can be imported without a permit from the department of agriculture, which issues about 400 a year.

Character and Money.

Character is money; and according as the man earns or spends the money, money in turn becomes character. As money is the most evident power in the world's uses, so the use that he makes of money is often all that the world knows of a man's silver letter.

There is no evidence that a phar-macal, as now known existed in America preceding the Revolution. The first American pharomacal was issued in 1778 by William Broun at Lancaster, Pa. It was a little work of 32 pages for the use of the military hospital of Washington's army.

Deeply Touched.

"I'm considered a hard man," remarked Mr. Grunson. "But when a motorist slows up long enough to enable me to get from a trolley car and reach the curb without leaping for my life I feel like turning around and taking my hat off to him."—Baltimore Age-Herald.

Faith and Works.

"Faith without works is like a bird without wings; she may hop with her companions on earth, yet she will never fly with them to heaven; but when both are joined together, then doth the soul mount up to her eternal rest."—J. Beaumont.

The Rug-Coat

It's quite the thing now, if you have a rug, to make it into a straight, unbelted coat fastened on one side. It isn't lined and its edges are bound with heavy silk shawl. Putting a rug you have made for your heavy topeast. Few short models are shown in these styles—the coats usually come well below the dress hem.

Greek Mythology.

Mythology of the Greeks is as intimately associated with the stars as the religion of the Egyptians, and it is from the students of these nations that we have received many of our valuable lessons. The prospect of solving problems heretofore insurmountable are becoming brighter with the inventions of modernity.

True Talk.

W. L. George says: "No woman's face lasts a man more than a year or two. However beautiful it is, he knows all about it, he may not be sick of it, but he ceases to take interest in it. You may catch a man with your face, but it is with something else you hold him—with charm. If you have no charm, you are making him feel like a god your soul and that nobody is interested in him as you do."—Boston Herald.

Tidal Waves Called "Bore." A "Bore" is a rapid tidal wave which flows up a river, the water then runs back out with great force. It is the most celebrated bore in the world in the Amazon, India, and the Bay of Fundy. The bore in the Amazon has been known to reach a height of 100 feet.
